

PRY

Such deep designs of empire does he lay
O'er them, whose cause he seems to take in hand;
And prudently would make them lords at sea,
To whom with ease he can give laws by land. Dryden.
PRUDERY. n. f. [from prude.] Overmuch nicety in conduct.
PRUDISH. adj. [from prude.] Affectedly grave.
I know you all expect, from seeing me,
Some formal lecture, spoke with prudish face. Garrick.
To PRUNE. v. a. [of unknown derivation.]
1. To lop; to divert trees of their superfluities.
So lop'd and pruned trees do flourish fair. Davies.
Let us ever extol
His bounty, following our delightful task,
To prune those growing plants, and tend these flow'rs. Milt.
What we by day
Lop overgrown, or prune, or prop, or bind,
One night with wanton growth derides,
Tending to wild.
Horace will our superfluous branches prune,
Give us new rules, and set out harp in tune. Waller.
You have no less right to correct me, than the same hand that raised a tree, has to prune it. Pope.
2. To clear from excrescences.
His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his beak. Shaksp.
Many birds prune their feathers; and crows seem to call upon rain, which is but the comfort they receive in the relenting of the air. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The mule, whose early voice you taught to sing,
Preen'd her heights, and pruned her tender wing. Pope.
To PRUNE. v. n. To dress; to prink. A ludicrous word.
Every scribbling man
Grows a lop as fast as e'er he can,
Prunes up, and asks his oracle the glass,
If pink or purple best become his face. Dryden.
PRUNE. n. f. [prune, prunus, Fr. prunum, Lat.] A dried plum.
In drying of pears and prunes in the oven, and removing of them, there is a like operation. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
PRUNEL. n. f. An herb. Ainsworth.
PRUNELLO. n. f.
1. A kind of stuff of which the clergymen's gowns are made.
Worth makes the man, and want of it, the fellow;
The rest is all but leather or prunello. Pope.
2. [Prunelle, Fr.] A kind of plum. Ainsworth.
PRUNER. n. f. [from prune.] One that crops trees.
Left thy redundant juice
Should fading leaves, instead of fruits, produce,
The pruner's hand with letting blood must quench
Thy heat, and thy exuberant parts retrench. Denham.
PRUNITERIOUS. adj. [prunum and fero, Lat.] Plum bearing.
PRUNINGHOOK. n. f. A hook or knife used in lopping
PRUNINGKNIFE. f. trees.
Let thy hand supply the pruningknife,
And crop luxuriant stragglers. Dryden.
No plough shall hurt the glebe, no pruninghook the vine.
Dryden's Virgil.
The cyder land obsequious still to thrones,
Her pruninghooks extended into swords. Philips.
PRUVIENCE. n. f. [from prurio, Lat.] An itching or a great PRUVIENCY. f. desire or appetite to any thing. Swift.

PRUVINGIOUS. adj. [prurio, Lat.] Tending to an itch.
To PRY. v. n. [of unknown derivation.] To peep narrowly;
to inspect officiously, curiously, or impertinently.
I can counterfeit the deep tragedian,
Speak, and look back, and pry on ev'ry side, Intending deep suspicion. Shaksp. Richard III.
I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,
When for his hand he had his two sons heads. Shaksp.
Watch thou, and wake when others be asleep,
To pry into the secrets of the state. Shaksp.
We of th' offending side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement;
And stop all sight holes, every loop, from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us. Shaksp.
He that pryeth in at her windows, shall also hearken at her doors. Eclips. xiv. 23.
And pry
In every bush and brake, where hap may find
The serpent sleeping. Milton.
We have naturally a curiosity to be prying and searching into forbidden secrets. L'Estrange.
Search well
Each grove and thicket, pry in ev'ry shape,
Left hid in some th' arch hypocrite escape. Dryden.
I wak'd, and looking round the bow'r
Search'd ev'ry tree, and pry'd on ev'ry flow'r,
If any where by chance I might esp'y
The rural poet of the melody. Dryden.
Nor need we with a prying eye survey
The distant skies, to find the milky way.
Actions are of so mixt a nature, that as men pry into them, so observe some parts more than others, they take different hints, and put contrary interpretations on them. Addison.

All these I frankly own without denying;
But where has this Praxiteles been prying? Addison.
PSALM. n. f. [psalm, psalms, Fr. psalm, Lat.] A holy song.
The choice and flower of all things profitable in other books, the psalms do both more briefly contain and more movingly express, by reason of that poetical form wherewith they are written. Hooker, b. v. f. 37.
Sternhold was made groom of the chamber, for turning certain of David's psalms into verse. Peachment.
Those just spirits that wear victorious palms,
Hymns devote and holy psalms
Singing continually.
In another psalm, he speaks of the wisdom and power of God in the creation. Barnes's Theory of the Earth.
PSALMIST. n. f. [psalmiste, Fr. from psalm.] Writer of holy songs.
How much more rational is this system of the psalmist, than the Pagans scheme in Virgil, where one deity is represented as railing a storm, and another as laying it? Addison.
PSALMODY. n. f. [psalmodie, Fr. psalmody, Lat.] The act or practice of singing holy songs.
PSALMOGRAPHY. n. f. [psalmographie, Fr. psalm and graphein.] The act of psalms; a psalmbook.

PSALTERY. n. f. A kind of harp beaten with sticks.
The trumpets, flutes, psalteries and fifes
Make the sun dance. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
Praise with trumpets, pierce the skies,
Praise with harps and psalteries. Sandys's Paraph.
The sweet finger of Israel with his psalter, loudly resounded the benefits of the almighty creator. Peachment.
Nought shall the psalter and the harp avail,
When the quick spirits their warm march forbear,
And numbing coldness has unbrac'd the ear. Prior.
PSUEDO. n. f. [from ψευδης.] A prefix, which, being put before words, signifies false or counterfeit: as, psuedopistle, a counterfeit apostle.
PSUEDOGRAPHY. n. f. False writing.
I will not pursue the many psuedographies in use, but shew of how great concern the emphasis were, if rightly used. Held.
PSUEDOLOGY. n. f. [ψευδολογια.] Falsehood of speech.
It is not according to the sound rules of psuedology, to report of a pious prince, that he neglects his devotion, but you may report of a merciful prince, that he has pardoned a criminal who did not deserve it. Arbutnot.
PSHAW. interj. An expression of contempt.
A peevish fellow has some reason for being out of humour, or has a natural incapacity for delight, and therefore disturbs all with pilches and pschaws. Spektator, N° 439.
PTISAN. n. f. [ptisane, Fr. ptisan, Lat.] A medical drink made of barley decocted with raisins and liquorice.
Thence happy were those golden days of old,
When dear as Burgundy the ptisane fold;
When patients chose to die with better will,
Than breathe and pay the apothecary's bill. Garth.
In fevers the aliments prescribed by Hippocrates, were ptisane and cream of barley. Arbutnot.
PTYALISM. n. f. [ptyalism, Fr. ptyalisme, Lat.] Salivation; effusion of spittle.
PTYSMAGOGUE. n. f. [ptysmagoge, Fr. ptysmagoge, Lat.] A medicine which discharges spittle. Ditt.
PUBERTY. n. f. [puberté, Fr. pubertas, Lat.] The time of life in which the two sexes begin first to be acquainted.
The cause of changing the voice at the years of puberty seemeth to be, for that when much of the moisture of the body, which did before irrigate the parts, is drawn down to the permatrical vessels, it leaveth the body more hot than it was, whence cometh the dilatation of the pipes. Bacon.
All the carnivorous animals would have multiplied exceedingly, before these children that escaped could come to the age of puberty. Bentley's Sermon.
PUBESCENCE. n. f. [from pubescere, Lat.] The state of arriving at puberty.
Solon divided it into ten septenaries; in the first is deden-tation or falling of teeth, in the second pubescence. Brown.
PUBESCENT. adj. [from pubescens, Lat.] Arriving at puberty.
That the women are menstruant, and the men pubescent at the year of twice seven, is accounted a punctual truth. Brown.
PUBLICAN. n. f. [from publicus, Lat.]
1. A toll gatherer.
As Jesus sat at meat, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him. Math. ix. 10.
2. A man that keeps a house of general entertainment. In low language.
PUBLICATION. n. f. [publicatio, Lat.]
1. The act of publishing; the act of notifying to the world; divulgation; proclamation.
For the instruction of all men to eternal life, it is necessary, that the sacred and saving truth of God be openly published unto them, which open publication of heavenly mysteries is by an excellency termed preaching. Hooker.
2. Edition;

PUB

2. Edition; the act of giving a book to the public.
An imperfect copy having been offered to a bookseller, you consented to the publication of one more correct. Pope.
The publication of these papers was not owing to our folly, but that of others. Swift.
PUBLIC. adj. [publicus, publicus, Fr. publicus, Lat.]
1. Belonging to a state or nation; not private.
By following the law of private reason, where the law of public should take place, they breed disturbance. Hooker.
Of royal maids how wretched is the fate,
Born only to be victims of the state;
Our hopes, our wishes, all our passions try'd
For public use, the slaves of others pride. Gravill.
Have we not able counsellors, hourly watching over the public weal. Swift.
2. Open; notorious; generally known.
Joseph being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privately. Math.
3. General; done by many.
A dismal universal his, the sound
Of public scorn. Milton.
4. Regarding not private interest, but the good of the community.
They were public hearted men, as they paid all taxes, so they gave up all their time to their country's service, without any reward. Clarendon.
All nations that grew great out of little or nothing, did so merely by the public mindedness of particular persons. South.
A good magistrate must be endued with a public spirit, that is with such an excellent temper, as sets him loose from all selfish views, and makes him endeavour towards promoting the common good. Atterbury.
5. Open for general entertainment.
The income of the commonwealth is raised on such as have money to spend at taverns and public houses. Addison.
PUBLICK. n. f. [from publicus, Lat. publicus, Fr.]
1. The general body of mankind, or of a state or nation; the people.
The publick is more disposed to censure than to praise. Add.
2. Open; general notice.
Philosophy, though it likes not a gaudy dress, yet, when it appears in publick, must have so much complacency, as to be clothed in the ordinary fashion. Locke.
In private grief, but with a careless scorn;
In publick seem to triumph, not to mourn. Gravill.
In publick 'tis they hide,
Where none distinguish. Pope.
PUBLICLY. adv. [from public.]
1. In the name of the community.
This has been so sensibly known by trading nations, that great rewards are publicly offered for its supply. Addison.
2. Openly; without concealment.
Sometimes also it may be private, communicating to the judges some things not fit to be publicly delivered. Bacon.
PUBLICLY. n. f. [from public.]
1. State of belonging to the community.
The multitude of partners does detract nothing from each private share, nor does the publickness of it lessen propriety in it. Boyle.
2. Openness; state of being generally known or public.
PUBLICLY. adj. [from public.] Having regard to the general advantage above private good.
'Tis enough to break the neck of all honest purposes, to kill all generous and publick spirited motions in the conception. L'Estrange.
These were the publick spirited men of their age, that is,
patriots of their own interest. Dryden.
Another publick spirited project, which the common enemy could not foresee, might set King Charles on the throne. Add.
It was generous and publick spirited in you, to be of the kingdom's side in this dispute, by shewing, without reserve, your disapprobation of Wood's design. Swift.
To PUBLISH. v. a. [publio, Fr. publico, Lat.]
1. To discover to mankind; to make generally and openly known; to proclaim; to divulge.
How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that You thus have published me. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.
His commission from God and his doctrine tend to the impressing the necessity of that reformation, which he came to publish. Hammond's Fundamentals.
Suppose he should relent,
And publish grace to all. Milton.
Th' unwearied fun, from day to day,
Does his Creator's power display,
And publishes to every land,
The work of an almighty hand. Addison's Spectator.
2. To put forth a book into the world.
If I had not unwarily too far engaged myself for the present publishing it, I should have kept it by me. Digby.
PUBLISHER. n. f. [from publish.]
1. One who makes publick or generally known.

PUD

Love of you
Hath made me publisher of this pretence. Shaksp.
The holy lives, the exemplary sufferings of the publishers of this religion, and the surpassing excellence of that doctrine which they published. Atterbury.
2. One who puts out a book into the world.
A collection of poems appeared, in which the publisher has given me some things that did not belong to me. Prior.
PUCELAGE. n. f. [French.] A state of virginity. Ditt.
PUCK. n. f. [perhaps the same with pug.] Some sprite among the fairies, common in romances.
O gentle pucc, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain. Shaksp.
Turn your cloaks,
Quoth he, for pucc is busy in these oaks,
And this is fairy ground. Corbet.
PUCKBALL or puccball. n. f. [from pucc the fairy, a fairy's ball.]
A kind of mushroom full of dust. Ditt.
To PUCKER. v. a. [from pucc the fairy; as effluvia, from eluv; or from pucc, a pocket or hollow.] To gather into corruga-tions; to contract into folds or plications.
I saw a hideous spectre; his eyes were sunk into his head, his face pale and withered, and his skin puccered up in wrinkles. Spektator, N° 192.
A ligature above the part wounded is pernicious, as it puccers up the intestines, and disorders its situation. Sharp.
PUDDER. n. f. [This is commonly written pudder. See POTTER. This is most probably derived by Mr. Lye from puddur, Illandick, a rapid motion.] A tumult; a turbulent and irregular buffle.
Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pudder o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies. Shaksp. King Lear.
What a pudder is made about essences, and how much is all knowledge pestered by the careless use of words? Locke.
To PUDDER. v. n. [from the noun.] To make a tumult;
to make a buffle.
Mathematicians, abstracting their thoughts from names, and setting before their minds the ideas themselves, have avoided a great part of that perplexity, puddering and confusion, which has so much hindered knowledge. Locke.
To PUDDER. v. z. To perplex; to disturb; to confound.
He that will improve every matter of fact into a maxim, will abound in contrary observations, that can be of no other use but to perplex and pudder him. Locke.
PUDGING. n. f. [pudden, Welsh, an intestine; pudding, French;
pudding, Swedish.]
2. A kind of food very variously compounded, but generally made of meal, milk, and eggs.
Salads, and eggs, and lighter fare
Tune the Italian spark's guitar;
And if I take Dan Congreve right, Pudding and beef make Britons fight. Prior.
3. The gut of an animal.
Hell yield the crow a pudding one of these days; the king has kill'd his heart. Shaksp. Henry V.
As sure as his guts are made of puddings. Shaksp.
3. A bowl stuffed with certain mixtures of meal and other ingredients.
Mind neither good nor bad, nor right nor wrong,
But eat your pudding, slave, and hold your tongue. Prior.
PUDGINGPIE. n. f. [pudding and pie.] A pudding with meat baked in it.
Some cry the covenant, instead
Of puddingpies and gingerbread. Hudibras.
PUDGINGTIME. n. f. [pudding and time.]
1. The time of dinner; the time at which pudding, anciently the first dish, is set upon the table.
2. Nick of time; critical minute.
Mars that still protects the stout,
In puddingtime came to his aid. Hudibras.
PUDGLE. n. f. [from puddles, Lat. Skinner; from puil, dirt, old Bavarian, Junius; hence puil.] A small muddy lake;
a dirty pash.
The Hebrews drink of the well-head, the Greeks of the stream, and the Latins of the puddle. Hall.
Thou didst drink
The stale of horles, and the gilded puddle
Which beals would cough at. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleop.
A physician cured madmen thus; they were tied to a stake, and then set in a puddle, 'till brought to their wits. L'Estr.
Treading where the treacherous puddle lay,
His heels flew up; and on the grassy floor
He fell, belmeard with filth. Dryden's Virgil.
Happy was the man, who was sent on an errand to the most remote street, which he performed with the greatest alacidity, ran through every puddle, and took care to return covered with dirt. Addison's Freeholder.
To PUDGLE. v. a. [from the noun.] To muddy; to pollute with dirt; to mix dirt and water.
As if I saw my fun shine in a puddled water, I cried out of nothing but Mopla. Sidney.
Some
